

Recession: public won't help developers

If an approved development project is now unaffordable because of the economic downturn, should the community benefits package (improved roads, public transport funding, traffic calming, education provision, etc.) be reduced in order to make sure the project can still go ahead?

